

Figure 1: Comparison of preference distribution modeling approaches. The Mixed Logit model estimates parameters for individual constituent Normal distributions which combine to form the resultant distribution. The HAVAN model directly predicts parameters for an aggregate Normal distribution based on input variables.